The narrator talks about his house, made of paper, clouds, rain, and jasmines. But there always came wars, storms, and frosts to ruin them. But he is not disappointed. He builds his house with dreams. Now his dream house cannot be destroyed by any wars, storms or frosts. Now there are clouds, rains, colors and songs in his house.

Author About:

was born in May 1940 in Kerman. He migrated to Tehran in 1947 and attended Darolfonoon when he was a high schooler. Ahmadreza Ahmadi is avant-garde and influential contemporary Iranian poet for adults, but he began his work for children's and young adult literature with Kanoon. In the 1970's, Ahmadi was active in the music department of this institute and valuable works in the field of children's music or literature accompanied by music were released under his supervision. His stories are combinations of prose and poetry, creating a special style for children's and young adult literature, which distinguishes him. Using the imagination and repetitive motifs such as colors, nature, childhood, etc. link his works together. Concepts that are dealt with by Ahmadi in his works are global and human concepts. He has been recommended for Astrid Lindgren and Hans Christian Andersen awards by various Iranian organizations several times and his works have been translated into different languages.

Goodbye, the Old Raccoon

Written by: Claire Joubert

Illustrated by: Claire Joubert

Publisher: INSTITUTE FOR THE INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT OF CHILDREN AND YOUNG ADULT

Category: Children / Young Adults

Publish Date: 2013

36 Pages

Dimension: 22x22

ISBN: 9789643915049

Book About:

Once a rabbit did not like to be born. His 6 sisters and brothers had already been born, but he was still in his mother's womb. The old wise raccoon talked to him and helped him to be born. The old raccoon became his best friend and he asked him all his questions. The spring and summer passed and Tak was growing up, but the old raccoon grew older and more tired. One day, he felt he was dying soon, so he told Tak about it and said goodbye. Tak was so upset. One day when Tak went to visit the old raccoon, he found him asleep, but no matter how many times he called him, he didn't wake up. Other animals also gathered there and verified that the old raccoon had passed away. Tak was surprised and objected, "But he's still here. How could he pass away while he's still here?" He didn't know when someone passed away, he would leave his body in this world. The animals helped to bury the old raccoon. Tak was so sad and wept all the time until he saw the old raccoon in his dream one night. He told him, "Do you remember you didn't want to be born? You thought your mother's womb is the best place in the world. But you were wrong. You came into this world and found it beautiful and wonderful. It's much more beautiful and wonderful here. Whenever you miss me, you can talk to God instead and learn to love and hold me in your heart." The intimate friendship between Tak and the old raccoon made it hard for Tak to believe that he was dead. The writer intends to familiarize children with death.

Author About:

writer and illustrator was born in Paris in May 1961. She was brought up in a Christian family. She converted to Islam at the age of nineteen and immigrated to Iran when she got married. Claire Joubert has a bachelor's degree in educational sciences. She illustrates her stories herself. With a cursory look at her works, one can easily perceive her preoccupation with issues such as faith and religion, identity, children's relations with their surroundings, etc. Most of this writer's works are for primary- age children. Joubert is also interested in doing research on children's literature and philosophy for children. She writes both in Persian and French and has published some French books in Lebanon and France, but her preference is to write in Persian.
